Through World Beauty Tour We all look for beauty inspiration in different means. Whether it's not reading a magazine, scrolling through Instagram feed, or watching merchandise tutorials on YouTube, today the infinite possibilities. But to make artist Stephanie Flor, beauty goes beyond browsing the internet. Instead, he seeks inspiration from travelers directly where the sources of the most popular ingredients and beauty ingredients come from—a concept that has led him to launch his own travel agency through World Beauty. The agency is dedicated to organizing guided tours in different focus places in all things beauty. She greeted her participants exploring the ritulla beauty practicing by women of various cultures around the world. The quality of the trip started with the curiosity of finding who I was, explaining Flor, which includes customers including Mariah Carey and Dasha Polanco. The first ATWB destination was in Ecuador, where part of its Latina roots come from. I wanted to go to the Amazon, which is where I inspired about beauty at the beginning. Since then, ATWB has been organizing trips to different countries such as India, Japan, New York City, and, the most popular ones, Morocco. From the minute that they reach the minute to leave, we have organized an experience of research and connection that we have to show an authentic experience of what beauty actually is in [these countries], says Flor, when we ask him about what to expect from each trip. Launching destinations each year (Peru and Mexico are next), the trip not only includes trying out different beauty treatments, but also covering the story behind these ancient traditions. Every day heals in a way where there is a different subject of beauty, he explains. Beauty is religion, food, fashion, spirituality. Through World Beauty Tours For example, in the morocco trip, travel the one-day experience in the Amman, a traditional banner that Morocans go clean and relax. There, experts are sharing the story behind this tradition with tour participants to get to experience the full rhythmic, including an olive black soap, mud mineral naf, and clean blossome oranges. In the majority of the tours, participants also get to experience a guided tour of the markets and shops, where they get to learn about trends and popular ingredients while they could buy for local products. With a mission to strengthen local communities and to dive curious travelers into these cultures in a native way, ATWB partners with local cooperating and hire female guides to share a first-hand look at the beauty traditions that have passed down from generation to generation. We understand that travel is so much better when you invest your money into something good and you're raising the people [in the community] as well as getting raised yourself, Flor explains. Around the World Beauty Tours Travels can be a life-changing experience, no matter which destination you choose to visit. If you're a beauty junkie (like us!), it might be an opportunity to find out about the story behind your favorite ingredients and provide a new meaning to your beauty routine. That's where ATWB tours come in. With its one-of-a-kind, beauty-focused experience at different destinations, it's the perfect opportunity to look at what beauty means to you beyond just taking a very Instagram photo. And Flor, the biggest design from these experiences, besides learning about these cultures, is the relationships and connections that you make from the tours. You make a family if you travel with us, she assured. If you are ready to pack your bag (we already do!) and book one of their next destination this year -- Morocco in September and Japan in November in -- you can do that in the profiles We travel here. If you can't bite the bullet just yet but still want a little taste of the experience, Flor is soon launching an ATWB box in partnership with Argan Cooperative from Morocco. In this box you will receive the signature products that people in the Morocco Tours receive when they visit. Proceedings [in the beauty box] will go on to make the journey to the cooperative available to anyone traveling to Morocco, not just to those who book a trip with [ATWB], says Flor. Flor.
